Cyberpsychology and Threat Intelligence: Assessing Risk Online

JANUARY 30, 2018 | VANCOUVER, BC

Find better online information, in less time, at less cost, with less risk™

This essential one-day training program will enable frontline personnel and their managers to:

- More accurately investigate and assess risk in our digitally hyperconnected world;
- Enhance threat assessment capabilities;
- Proactively create safer public and private spaces within our communities.

Presented by two internationally renowned experts in the Behavioural Sciences and Social Media Intelligence (SOCMINT), this ground-breaking program will use recent case studies to develop the skills to collect, analyze, and assess online content to reduce the risk of violent behaviour in a wide range of scenarios.

LEARN ABOUT

- The deeper meaning of online identities;
- Modern stalking issues and cyberstalking subtypes;
- Trolling, bullying, and online gangs;
- Social media and the "Dark Web": Current tools and techniques for collecting, collating, and analyzing online content in the threat assessment process;
- The disinhibiting effect of being online and cyber concepts such as escalation, socialization, and syndication;
- Pathological and normal personality subtypes, and how this relates to who is at risk of violence, and who is at risk of being victimized;
- Online sexual offending and the individuals who perpetrate those crimes;
- The personality types that are vulnerable to specific social engineering strategies in cyber security breaches;
- The psychological pathway in radicalization and terrorism;
- Calhoun and Weston's concept of "Howlers" versus "Hunters" in the threat assessment domain, and how this translates into online behaviours.
