Cyberpsychology & Threat Intelligence: Assessing Risk Online

Dates: To Be Determined | Locations: To Be Determined

Cyberpsychology & Threat Intelligence: Assessing Risk Online is an essential two-day training program that will enable front-line personnel and their managers to:

- More accurately investigate and assess risk in our digitally hyper-connected world;
- Enhance threat assessment capabilities;
- Proactively create safer public and private spaces within our communities.

Presented in partnership by two internationally renowned experts in the fields of Behavioural Sciences and Social Media Intelligence (SOCMINT), this ground-breaking program will use recent case studies to develop the skills required to collect, analyze, and assess online content to reduce the risk of violent behaviour in a wide range of scenarios.

LEARN ABOUT

- The deeper meaning of online identities
- Modern stalking issues and cyberstalking subtypes
- Trolling, bullying, and online gangs
- Social media and the Dark Web: Current tools and techniques for collecting, collating, and analyzing online content in the threat assessment process
- The psychology of hackers and "hacktivists"
- The disinhibiting effect of being online and cyber concepts such as escalation, socialization, and syndication
- Pathological and normal personality subtypes, and how this relates to who is at risk of violence, and who is at risk of being victimized
- Online sexual offending and the individuals who perpetrate those crimes
- The personality types that are vulnerable to specific social engineering strategies in cyber security breaches
- The psychological pathway in radicalization and terrorism
- How relevant psychological items within Dr. Reid Meloy's TRAP-18 (Terrorist Radicalization Assessment Protocol) may appear online
- Calhoun and Weston's concept of "Howlers" versus "Hunters" in the threat assessment domain, and how this translates into online behaviours
